	Supporting a step-change in housing supply - what's needed from London's infrastructure? With a need to build 65,000 homes a year in London we need to look across the whole of the capital. As seen with the Elizabeth Line and the northern line extension, infrastructure improvements have the potential to unlock housing supply. Hear from our expert panel about how housing and infrastructure can work together, what more needs to happen and their hopes for the future	Creating a super connected smart London To stay competitive London needs to stay at the forefront of the digital economy, by creating a super connected smart city. This panel discussion will explore how London is embracing digital transformation and the use of new technology (e.g. data analytics, mobile and embedded devices) to drive urban policy, and whether London has the digital infrastructure to support the connectivity the digital economy demands.	From Crossrail 1 to Crossrail 2 - maximising the growth potential As we approach the opening of Crossrail 1 next year, and with plans for Crossrail 2 advancing, this session provides an opportunity to reflect on lessons learned from Crossrail 1 in unlocking housing and wider development potential along the route
